

ABSTRACT

Telecommunication terminal having means for transmitting a stream of packets of data to an access router to a telecommunication network, characterized in that it comprises means for inserting client information into said stream indicating if said stream corresponds to a mobile telephone standard or not.

Figure to be published: 1